HONGKONG MAY 24, 1865.

THE Oriflamme brought down a cargo of Rice from Shanghai we understand, which is deliverable at Whampoa.

THE batch of pirates, a portion of whom were apprehended on board the Feiseen (on the information of a boy whom they held captive) and handed by Capt. Carroll to the Police, were tried yesterday at the Supreme Court. There were ten in all. Seven were convicted and were sentenced to be hanged—the evidence of identity regarding the other three failed.

WE observe that the contemplated line of steamers between California and China, towards the maintenance of which the Federal Congress have sanctioned a subsidy of half a million of dollars per annum, is to make Shanghai its terminus and not Hongkong. It could hardly be expected that the Federal Congress would so far forget its animosity towards British institutions, as to consent to make a British Crown colony the terminus of a subsidised line of steamers. True, it may be argued with some degree of force, that Hongkong is a free port and the centre of a widely spread radius of steam communication; that United States citizens have precisely the same privileges here as though the place were their own; and that American interests would be far better served by this colony forming the terminus; whilst on the other hand, the port dues of Shanghai are heavy, the facilities for docking and repairing restricted, and the advantages to be derived from the communication limited. Yet still these considerations weigh but little in the minds of politicians trained as politicians are now-a-days, in the school of partisanship, jobbery, and nepotism.

But beyond these considerations, there is little or no trade between Shanghae and San Francisco, whilst between Hongkong and San Francisco there is a considerable trade and passenger traffic. The establishment of the Hongkong Mint, should also cause a large quantity of Silver to be sent from San Francisco to this.

The principal interest of the United States in China, is shipping. Now we ask of what use will a line of steamers to Shanghai be in this respect? Shanghai is not a place for ships to call for orders, whilst that is just what Hongkong peculiarly is. The owner of a vessel in the United States, knowing the time about which his craft will be in Hongkong, would be vastly benefitted by this line of steamers, if Hongkong were the terminus, because he could communicate with his agents here within thirty days—and as all the ports on the China sea draw their shipping from Hongkong, the chances of employment will be manifold. With Shanghai as the terminus the communication will be prolonged at least ten days.

It is but natural that nations should seek to further their own interests in subsidising lines of steamers—but at the same time we fail to see the logic of the operation of "cutting off one's own nose to spite one's face," as the adage runs. We can understand the French making Saigon the terminus, or rather the head quarters of their subsidised line, because that port is the Capital of their colony, or possession of Cochin-China. Nevertheless the contractors for the steamers will be heavy losers by the policy which dictates the alteration.

But we cannot appreciate the motives of the U. S. Government in making Shanghai the terminus of their California line of steamers—firstly, because the port does not belong to them; secondly, because it has no trade with San Francisco; and thirdly, because of its disadvantages as compared with Hongkong as above stated. Besides which, sooner or later, the subsidised line with Shanghai for its terminus will surely have to complete at a great disadvantage with a private line with Hongkong for its terminus.

That a line of steamers adapted to the Trade would pay between this and California, we make no doubt. They should coal at Yokohama on the way to San Francisco, and at the Sandwich Islands on the way back. They should be screw steamers of full power, and tolerably heavily rigged. They should have poops for European passengers—forecastles for the crew, clear twixt decks for Chinese—and the hold for cargo. They should be vessels capable of carrying fifteen days coals at full steam.

We hope yet to see a joint stock Company raised in this colony for the purpose of carrying out this enterprise. The subsidy of the U. S. Government is not sufficient—their line will possibly pay a very small dividend, if neither interest nor wear and tear be reckoned.

WE are really ashamed of the British Government in relation to its procedure in Chinese matters. We have ever imagined that in dealing with a semi-barbarous power the Government of a Christian country should display fixedness of purpose, a great respect ... for its own Statutes. The British Government, after promising neutrality until they could induce no one to believe them, shirk all complaints by maintaining that the Consuls can please themselves as to when and in what cases they can put the law into force. That is to say, as the Consuls are under the control of the Minister at Peking, that functionary can carry out his crotchets by giving suitable instructions.

Thus although the law, after having been repeatedly altered, stands to the effect that a British subject may not serve in the ranks of either Mandarins or Taipings, the Consuls have evidently received instructions, only to put the law in force in cases where British subjects join or assist the Taipings. And furthermore, they have also instructions, in cases where the Mandarins prosecute British subjects, and fail to convict at a Consular Court, to allow the Imperial authorities to disregard exterritoriality on their own motion.

That a diplomatist should fall into such errors is not much to be wondered at: and that he should cause his subordinates, the consuls, to fall into his views, is perhaps still less marvellous. But that H. M. Ministers should avow such practises, and because of their inability to justify their conduct, should shelter themselves behind the black gowns of the Crown lawyers, and by a shameless quirking dictum, should crawl out of their responsibilities and denounce their own integrity, is a strong proof that they are hard put to it for an excuse.

In a late issue we showed how Colonel Sykes had put a question in the House of Commons on 20th March as to whether British Consuls in China were justified in allowing British subjects to serve in the Mandarin ranks within the limits of their Consulates, at direct variance with the law. The Attorney General was put forward with the quirk that Consuls could not be always searching after cases, but could only take such as came properly before them.

Again—on the 7th April, General Sykes asked Mr. Layard whether he had heard of a case reported in the China papers, to the effect that a local Mandarin hired a British steamer ... that the steamer captured one of these junks without meeting any resistence, killed one of the crew, and handed the rest to the Mandarins. The British Consul on hearing of the case fined the master $600, which was afterwards reduced to $400.

Mr. Layard replied that no report of the case had been received at the Foreign Office of the transaction—that if the Consul deemed it worthy of a special report, it would no doubt be reported. He then put forward the Attorney General's dictum that Consular Courts had to be properly moved.

It appears strange that Colonel Sykes should have been content with such a reply. In the case adduced the Consular Court did move—but it punished alleged piracy and murder with a fine, which was subsequently mitigated. Surely if a Consul can please himself as to whether he proceeds or not, he cannot inflict any punishment that may come into his head. The Consul did move we say in the case and punished alleged piracy and murder with a fine, but we little expected to see him supported at the Foreign office.

Thus we see Consuls elevated to a position unprecedented in the annals of British jurisprudence. They can prosecute or not as they may please, and can inflict any punishment they may choose. Justice all depends upon circumstances.

GENERAL PRUYN.

The United States Minister, and the Japanese Missionary.

When to the Empire of the Great Tycoon,
As Uncle Sam's Ambassador, General Pruyn
You came! Who thought your diplomatic lips
Would e'er be guilty of such foolish slips
As those your letter to New York exposes;
Is there an instance since the time of Moses,
Save yours, of envoy turning missionary?
Echo distinctly—promptly answers, "Nary."
Oh most Extraordinary Envoy Pruyn!
You little thought you'd be recalled so soon.
Did you not rather fondly hope to squeeze
A pile of itzebus from the Japanese,
And draw a rental from that "splendid Lot"?
Come answer General truly! Did you not?
Nay swear by this flag—by all its Stripes and Stars,
Hope to convert a few more British Tars?
And tell us too, most sage Intriguant
Wherefore "Reformed Dutch Propagandists" plant
Missions to teach the Heathen, and straightway
Neglecting them,—such ardor to display
As to extend their doctrines to those who's case
"The law provides abundant means of grace"?
Explain, explain, consistency's a jewel
Reply, referring not to Dr. Newell!
What though irreverent outsiders laugh
Hint audibly of "gammon," "stuff," and "chaff,"
Say that the spiritual influences which pervaded
Your meetings were materially aided
By something kept a square-faced bottle in,
In fact, that noxious fluid known as Gin.
All such insinuations you can scorn,
Demand the proof, and get it—"in a Horn"
But, Oh how thankful should poor British Jack
Be, to encounter in Japan, a pack
Of Preachers for his future weal to pray
And kindly take his hard earned dimes away!
And therefore General, Oh how sad to learn
That uncle Abe has ordered to return
The only man whom British gunners could
Find in Japan to do them any good!
But now it seems by some it has been thought,
You've been "a doing what you had'nt ought."
That you a certain "pigin" did invent
Shipbroker betwixt the poor Tycoon and Dent
To play; choosing them both to just the tune
Of fifty thousand on that Ly-ee-moon"
That from the Daimios by—I don't say robbery,
You've made a pile—perhaps the term is 'Jobbery.'
That for a shrewd diplomatist, you've made
Assertions—which unproved were well unsaid
That even for a Minister Potential
Your style has been by far too consequential
In short, that, altho' undoubtedly a Pruyn,
And in a stew, you're actually a "spoon."
Be these things false or not, one thing is true
That you have suddenly disappeared from view
Carrying off no good name, but lots of Tin,
That's the main point,—so General

From our Paris Correspondent.

Courrier de Paris.

Last week we had snow, frost, rain and hail: at the present moment we are suffocated with heat Dust has taken the place of mud, and parasols have replaced umbrellas, and the sudden advent of Spring flowers and fine weather causes us to forget the chilliness of winter. But how long will all this last? We know not and it would hardly be thought that a great danger menaces us, the greater that its nature is unknown to us. It is the plague of Siberia—a scourge which carries off both Doctors and patients, and does not spare chroniclers; if therefore you no longer receive news from me, you may believe that I have died of the plague of Siberia.

To speak the truth no one has yet experienced it, not the slightest symptom has appeared on the horizon,—but everyone talks of it, and that is sufficient to create fear, but as we are the most witty people on earth, we laugh at every thing for fear ... as the Barber of Seville says.—For the last few days one makes a joke on this really serious affair and every one thinks his joke charming; but this is one way of treating matters, and the Parisian when he says the most absurd thing in the world always adds "That would do for Punch."

The ambition of writing in a Journal is very common with our youth. There is not a Frenchman alive, who has learnt grammar, who has not once in his life sent a certain quantity of anecdotes, &c. to a Journal, the editor of which, as he will tell you, has profited by them, this man no longer exists, and if he did, he should be stuffed and kept for the Universal Exhibition of 1867, of which I must now give you a few interesting details. The prince Napoleon has been named president of the Commission charged to execute this great enterprise, thanks to his cares the whole organization is definitively constituted: All the European governments have given in their adhesion in the most sympathetical manner to the proposition of the French government. It now appears that the first project will not suffice and that the great exhibition in course of preparation will require three times the space of that of 1855.

Whilst I was writing the preceding, the French Academy—the learned Society created by Cardinal Richelieu, proceeded to the election of new members to fill the vacancies caused by the death of Ampere and Alfred de Vigny. I have just learnt that the election is terminated, and that Messrs. Prevost, Paradal and Camille Doucet have obtained the majority. Two competitors Messrs. Autran and Jules Janin who have demanded admittance into the learned assembly for the last 10 years are postponed to the Greek Kalends. The newly elected M. Prevost Paradal is a Journalist of much talent who some years ago made a great noise in the Journal des Débats. He is now about to repose on his laurels and we may consider that he has quitted Literature. M. Camillo Doucet is a poet, his successes as a Dramatic author are numerous, and he would long since have crossed the threshold of the Palais Magazin, if he had not occupied an official position in the Ministry of the Interior, somewhat allied to that of the police, viz: chief of the office of Censure.

However we are satisfied with the election and we must be thankful to the academy for being reasonable in spite of M. Griystand Mgr. Dupanloup. There was great subject for laughter on Tuesday evening at the Italian Opera which is somewhat contrary to the custom of the subscribers of Mr. Baxier. The representation was Crispino a la Comare, one of the numerous works of ... nerally the most appreciated of the works of the great Composers, it has already been highly successful in Italy, and this success has been consecrated in Paris in the most brilliant manner.

The hero of the piece is a Cobbler, a poor devil who overwhelmed with misery has to work hard to support his family.

Crispin works and sings on his door step to amuse himself, but the Chemists and Doctors on the other side of the street soon silence him. His wife returns after having threaded all the streets of Venice to sell songs and returns without a halfpenny in her pocket. The unfortunate Crispin without any resource—takes to flight and is about to throw himself into a well when a fine Lady stops him—it is the Comare. Who are you? "says Crispin" "I am the Comare,"—"ah"—"but it is dangerous to speak to me my words are mortal." The Comare is death which not less blind, but, more clever than fortune—never fails us. It appears—and the fact is almost incredible—that the Comare at the moment she appeared to Crispin was at loggerheads with the Doctors—and to humiliate them—she takes the part of the cobbler and makes of him extraordinary Doctor such has never been seen any where and who never will make a mistake.

"All the time you do not see me appear at the "bed side of a sick man; you may be sure he "will get well in spite of what you may prescribe "If you see me on the contrary, visible to your-"self alone you may surely predict that he will "die."

Crispin as may be easily conceived, soon made a comfortable fortune, but it often happens that prosperity is harder to bear than misery, and the cobbler become a great man is rude to his wife—insults his former friends, and quarrels with the Comare and in fact gives himself up to the inebrity of sudden prosperity. The Comare gives Master Crispin an amusing walk in her Empire—when becoming himself again after escaping the terrible danger with which he, his wife and children have been threatened—his friends surround him and console him—the lesson is hard but profitable—and Crispin finds himself master of a comfortable fortune.

This Opera has been written more than 5 years and yet the style is fresh; gay and enlivening, it is one of the most charming models of the Italian School. The first act in which the excellent Comic Zucchieni, was warmly applauded and the duo between Crispin and the Comare contain passages of extreme beauty. The 2nd act contains beautiful details—but the capital point of the partition is the celebrated trio of the 3rd act which the public most warmly applauded. It is a great success for the clever Director who may now take his ease until the end of the season.

PENINSULAR & ORIENTAL STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY.

NOTICE OF REDUCTION OF PASSAGE MONEY.

IN the year 1857 the Directors made a considerable reduction in the Company's rates of Passage Money, which continued in force till 1861.

In that year, owing to the extraordinary rise in the Cost and Freight of Coals, and the enhanced price of all descriptions of Naval Stores, the Directors were reluctantly compelled to return to the rates of Passage Money previously in force. They are now happy to state that a decrease in the price of Coal and other expenses of Steam Navigation enables them to reduce the Company's Passage rates to the undernoted scale, which will take effect from and after the 1st June next, viz:—

From Hongkong to—

Suez,	$460
Malta,	510
Marseilles,	530
Gibraltar,	530
Southampton,	550
Reserved Rates for Single Persons.
Suez,	$920
Malta,	1,020
Marseilles,	1,060
Gibraltar,	1,060
Southampton,	1,100
Reserved Rates for Married Couples.
Suez,	$1,160
Malta,	1,260
Gibraltar,	1,348
Marseilles,	1,348
Southampton,	1,388

The charges for Children are in proportion to the above.

The above rates are exclusive of the amount payable to the Egyptian Transit Administration for conveyance of Passengers through Egypt, viz:—

For First-class Passengers, ... $32
Children above three and under ten years, half-fare.

By Order of the Managing Directors,
THOs. SUTHERLAND,
Superintendent.

Extracts.

The Money Market.

Our City correspondent writes:—

The suspension of Messrs. Charles Joyce and Co., East India merchants, which had been apprehended during the past week or two, is announced. It has been caused by the uninterrupted decline in Eastern and other produce, and their general liabilities are stated to be £1,100,000, of which £600,000 are direct to their parties who are thought to be able to meet them being primarily responsible for the remaining £500,000. At present no estimate has transpired of the value of the assets. Advices from Alexandria furnish some important facts regarding the financial results of the Government of the present Viceroy compared with that of his predecessor. The public debt created under Said Pacha was £12,700,000, and his Budget showed an expenditure of £4,350,000 against receipts £3,800,000 leaving a deficiency of £55,000, this expenditure moreover being composed £2,725,000 for the personal requirements of the Viceroy, and only £595,000 for the public services. The Budget of the present Government, on the other hand, shows for the year 1864, receipts £4,250,000 against an expenditure of £3,575,000, leaving a surplus of £675,000. The augmentation of the revenue has been chiefly through the Customs and stamp duties, while the reduction in the expenditure is from the fact of Ismail Pacha having limited his personal requirements to the modest sum of £300,000, whereby he has enabled the country to use its available funds for the improvement of its various departments of administration, military, naval, and educational. In the past year the sum appropriated to military and civil schools was £91,000—a purpose for which, under Said Pacha, the appropriation was only £3,750.—Times.

The American War.

The Army of the Potomac, which, after fighting a series of sanguinary battles, had settled down before the defences of Richmond, and was beginning to be somewhat overshadowed by the brilliant operations of the Army of the Tennessee, has—thanks to General Lee—resumed its place in the war with equal honour and success. A fortnight last Saturday, it was fighting for fifteen hours. General Lee, apparently anxious to shake off an adversary who was pressing too closely on his communications with Lynchburg, and perhaps thinking, moreover, that a successful blow at the enemy is never out of season, concentrated three divisions under General Gordon, and made a sudden and determined attack on Fort Steadman, in front of Petersburg. The garrison, surprised and overpowered, were unable to hold the fort, which passed into the hands of the assailants. A second battery was captured in the same manner before the necessary reinforcements could be brought up by General Meade. The Union troops on each flank of the forts maintained their ground, new troops came to their aid, and the tide of battle was turned. A third work, Fort Haskell, which the Confederates had attacked, was firmly held, and the assailants were repulsed with great loss. The second fort was also retaken, and then ensued a struggle for possession of Fort Steadman. It is at this critical stage of the history that the discrepancies between the Confederate and Union account of the conflict become prominent. General Lee, whose report tells nothing of the attack on Fort Haskell and the repulse of his troops there, states that after Fort Steadman had been captured, and two efforts of the enemy to retake it had been handsomely repulsed the Confederate troops were withdrawn because it was found that the enclosed works in the war could only be taken at too great sacrifice. The guns which are enumerated in his despatches could not be brought away, but were disabled. The Confederate loss was not heavy. So far General Lee. General Grant tells a somewhat different story. He says that when reinforcements were brought up the Confederates were driven out of Fort Steadman at the point of the bayonet, and that the guns in that work were found uninjured. In any case, and according to General Lee's own showing, the attack, creditable enough to his own men, was a complete failure, having resulted solely in the discovery that nothing effectual could be done. But this Confederate repulse was not the end of the day's proceedings. The Union General did not think that the concentration of his troops ought to have no greater consequence than the defeat of an attack, so he became the assailant in turn, and pushing forward the Second and Sixth Corps, captured some Confederate entrenchments. Of the value of these works we know nothing more than may be inferred from the strenuous effort which the Confederates made to retake them, and which having failed in the first instance, were renewed two days afterwards, and with no better success. But if they are worth nothing else, the possession of them by the Union troops shows the superiority of the captors. Gen. Lee reports that his loss was not heavy, and that he took 560 prisoners. Gen. Grant states that the loss was heavy on both sides; that he himself lost 2,000 men in killed, wounded, and missing; and that he took 1,800 prisoners, and he estimates the slaughter of the Confederates at 3,000. It seems difficult to understand how a conflict which lasted from daylight to eight o'clock at night, and in which works were taken and retaken, could have happened without heavy loss to both sides. The news from General Sherman's army is also important. Despatches have been published from the commander, dated March 22, but General Sherman himself was at City Point with General Grant, General Sheridan, and President Lincoln five days later. The despatch of March 22 refers to a very important engagement, or perhaps to a group or a series of engagements, on the previous day, the details of which must be very interesting to justify the language which General Sherman employs. He states that "the concentrated armies of the enemy—" viz., of Johnstone, Bragg, Hardee, and Hood—"had, on the 21st, been beaten on their chosen ground and were fleeing in disorder, leaving their dead and wounded, and burning the bridges in their retreat. On the same day Schofield occupied Goldsboro'. The campaign has resulted in a glorious success." The battle referred to appears to have been a sequel to that of Bentonville on the 19th. We shall not attempt to estimate this success by the semi-official accounts of Northern correspondents, which may prove no more trustworthy than those which we had last week through the Richmond papers. But it is now sufficiently apparent that General Johnstone has not been able to arrest Sherman's march at one single point. Mr. Lincoln had been at General Grant's headquarters several days at the date of the last advices from New York, and there was a general disposition to regard his presence there as connected with proposals of peace which were said to have been sent in by Gen. Lee. Any rumours of peace proposals supported by probable circumstances would deserve attention in the present posture of affairs; but this one appears to be not only completely "unhistorical," but without the least support from known facts. Mr. Lincoln may have gone to City Point for a dozen reasons besides the receipt or expectation of a message from General Lee. He may have fled thither to escape the officeseekers, whose greed, it seems, was never so fierce as now; or to meet Sherman, or to learn the prospects of the campaign, or because Grant's head-quarters had become for the time centre of the interests of the Republic. Any supposition is more probable than the statement of some of the New York journals that Mr. Lincoln resorted to City Point as a quiet place in which to recruit his health. We gather from all the news that is reaching us by mail after mail that the period of mere stragetic marches is over, and that, after years of disappointment, the final series of battles which are to decide Mr. Davis's gigantic experiment is indeed begun.—Daily News.

British Outrages in China.

Colonel Sykes asked the under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs whether Mr. Consul Swinhoe had made a report that the British merchant steamer Elphin, while loading sugar at Takao, was hired by the local Mandarin to go out of port and attack junks said to be piratical, on the agreement that captured junks should belong to the captain of the Elphin and crew; that the steamer went out and attacked a junk pointed out, which did not make any resistance, nevertheless she was fired into and one of the crew killed, and the remainder of the crew, twenty-one in number, taken prisoners and lodged in the hong of Messrs. Lester and Co., and the junk carried into Takao; that Mr. Consul Swinhoe tried the captain, a Prussian subject, and condemned him to a penalty of 500 dollars, afterwards reduced to 100, as a sufficient penalty for the murder; and, in case Consul Swinhoe's report had not been received, whether it would be sent for; and whether the Hongkong Ordinance, No. 1, of January 1855, which prohibits British subjects from giving military aid to the Chinese Government and the rebels would not be enforced, and commanders of British merchant vessels, or other offenders be suitably punished for shedding blood for profit—Mr. Layard: In answer to my hon. and gallant friend, I have to state that no report of the circumstance mentioned by him has been received at the Foreign-office. I do not think it necessary to send to Consul Swinhoe for a particular report, because it is the duty of the consul to report all such cases as may require special notice. If it had been a case requiring special notice, I have no doubt we should have had a full report. As regards the second part of the question, I can add nothing to what has been stated twice by the Attorney-General. The law, of course, will be put in force if proper evidence is produced and proper proceedings are taken before the consular court in China.—At its rising the House adjourned to Monday, the 24th April.—The London and China Express.

The Civil List of the Queen.

The Civil List of the Queen is very much less than that of any of her predecessors, and is, indeed, very much exceeded by the sovereigns of several second-rate States in the world. The income of George I. amounted up to one million sterling, and even that of William IV. (who was relieved from the burden of many charges to which his predecessors were liable) was £510,000. The Queen's Civil List is £385,000 and even the expenditure of that is dictated by Act of Parliament; £60,000 is allotted to the Privy Purse; £131,260 for the salaries of the Royal household; £44,240 for retiring allowances and pensions to servants, and £13,200 for Royal bounty, alms, &c. In order to give the reader some idea of the liberality with which this nation deals with its sovereign, we subjoin the amounts of a few Civil Lists and incomes belonging to some of the more prominent sovereigns in the world, premising that in several cases (in that of the French Emperor notoriously so), the maximum amount is by no means adhered to, but a large amount of debt is annually added to the regular allowance:—Emperor of Austria, £760,787; Emperor of France (with all debts of £3,200,000) £1,080,000; King of Italy, £650,000; the Pope (total income calculated at about) £1,000,000; King of Prussia (about) £450,000; Emperor of Russia (the income of the Crown domains is calculated at) £5,700,000; Queen of Spain, £525,500; King of Sweden, £268,800; King of Bavaria, £249,660; Sultan of Turkey, £1,333,882; Queen of Great Britain, and Ireland, and of colonies upon which the sun never sets, £385,000.—Ibid.

The Taipings and the Bible.

A letter, written by an Anglo-Taiping, has appeared in some of the English papers, strongly advising the recognition of the Taipings by England, and condemning those who prefer "the Buddhism, tyranny, and hatred of the Manchoo." He declares that the Taipings would Christianise China, and writes:—"I have often seen great bales of the newly-printed Bibles piled up in the late Taiping capital, Nanking, and sent off to the country for distribution. The Tienwang (Taiping King) employed upwards of 400 men printing the Bible, and more than 1,000 copies were regularly turned out every week. Nanking, through British interference, has been captured by the Imperialists, and the printing and circulation (or even possession of the Bible by a Chinaman) has been annihilated; therefore, I think, if any sincerity or Christian feeling induces the people of England to send so many missionaries to China, a very little of the same motive might cause them to at least endeavour to make the poor Chinese some recompense for what the wicked policy of our Government has destroyed. An opportunity now offers itself, and if the people do not take advantage of it, their silence may be taken for approval of the conduct of their Government towards the Taipings."—Ibid.
